President’s Message

BOMA is Your Last Line of Defense Against Bad Policy
You Can Help Us Make A Difference in November

Election season is upon us and BOMA has never played a more active role in trying to shape the political landscape than in 2010. I encourage everyone to attend our Election Forecast Forum on October 6th where noted business and political reporters will assess local and state candidates and ballot measures, and their potential impact on our industry.

BOMA has been a leader of multiple coalitions this year starting with an effort to bring fresh and moderate faces to the Democratic County Central Committee (DCCC), a key political grooming ground in our city. We have also collaborated with other business groups, and some factions of labor, to elect more moderate candidates and defeat bad legislation. All of this helps to stabilize the environment for commerce, support our clients’ collective business needs, enhance asset value, and protect owners’ private property rights.

Building on our Past Leading Our Future
BOMA San Francisco Celebrates A Century of Service

In 2011, BOMA San Francisco will celebrate its first century of service to commercial real estate owners, operators and service professionals. Our first 100 years have been marked by the rebuilding of the city after the devastating earthquake of 1906, showcasing San Francisco with the Panama Pacific International Exposition in 1915, dramatic development in the 50’s, 60’s and 70’s, followed by redevelopment of areas outside the historical downtown core. Through it all, BOMA San Francisco has stood as the most influential and effective advocacy, recruitment and training organization for the commercial real estate industry.

Our Centennial Celebration will kick off at BOMA’s Annual Meeting & Member Recognition Luncheon on October 14, 2010 at The City Club San Francisco. The celebration will culminate with the Centennial Celebration Gala on May 19, 2011 at the historic Palace Hotel. We have a lot to celebrate, and we want to ensure our members enjoy a memorable event.

Our Work Stinks...and we love it!

One whiff and you know it’s us. Crude, black and smelly. When American Asphalt shows up ready to work, we pour it on hot and spread it on thick. Our crews love to fill cracks, seal parking lots and pave everything from a private driveway to a half million sq ft Costco parking lot in the space of a weekend. Smiling the whole time.

BOMA Building Tour:
The Orrick Building—405 Howard Street

On August 19, BOMA members got an intimate look at The Orrick Building, 405 Howard Street, managed by Ashforth Pacific. This building was awarded first place, Medium Commercial Building Category in the 2010 EARTH Awards and is currently the highest rated LEED Platinum certified building in the country for Existing Buildings. The building is located on a 1.7-acre site on the corner of Howard and Fremont Streets, in the heart of San Francisco’s South Financial District. The 10 story, Class A building has 503,576 total square feet of floor space.

Senior Property Manager Blake Peterson and her team led members throughout the building. Additional presenters included Steve Hawkins/Engineer; Tom Fahey/Chief Engineer; Scott Lunski/Vice President of Engineering; Elle Vega/Property Administrator; Rich Schaeffer/Engineer; and David Montanez/Engineer.

Members toured unique building features such as the under floor HVAC distribution system and other sustainable building features contributing to The Orrick Building’s certification as the highest LEED EB Platinum rated building in the nation.
How far do you think you can drive a marshmallow? Well, if you were at the 56th Annual Elmer Johnson Golf Tournament you would have had the opportunity to find out courtesy of Liz Allio and her “crew” with Universal Protection Services who sponsored the Longest Drive. That’s right; members had the chance to drive a marshmallow instead of a golf ball which really equalized the playing field. The exercise was not only very entertaining but also quite revealing. The winners of the Longest Drive and recipients of $100 Gift Certificates were Manny Moreno (PM Realty) and Michelle Donnelly (CAC Real Estate Management Co., Inc.).

We must again thank all of our food sponsors beginning with Comcast Business Services for the champagne continental breakfast. Once on the field, players had a wonderful selection of food and beverages, including Able Services’ liquid refreshments and ribs; ABM Industries’ hot dogs, burgers and beer; Marble West’s tequila with bbq beef sandwiches; Skyline Construction’s ice cream, cigars, tequila and candy; and Waxie Sanitary Service’s mai tais and jambalaya.

Restoration Management sponsored the “19th Hole” once again this year which offered a nice networking opportunity before dinner. Caledonian Building Services graciously provided wine at the dinner table. If anyone left the day hungry or thirsty it was their own fault!

Thanks to all those companies that provided raffle prizes including $1000 cash provided by Recology Golden Gate, won by Jim Keenan (Letterman Digital); an iPad provided by Marble West, won by David Starkey (Kilroy Group); a flat screen tv, wine and a digital camera (and also tee bags) provided by Metropolitan Electric; and the Pebble Beach grand prize package worth $4000, won by Dan McNeer (American Technologies, Inc) and generously donated again this year by NRG Energy Center, San Francisco.

Much of the success was due to the top-notch event planning by event chair Fred West (Marble West), Associates Committee Chair Howard Fish (Skyline Construction), and the entire Associates Committee.

A Landlord’s Decision to Pursue Breach of Lease Damages—Art or Science?

by Scott W. Singer & Clifford R. Horner

As all BOMA members already know, tenant defaults over the past three years have increased significantly. The owner’s regaining possession of the Premises following a monetary default is typically not expensive or time consuming. The expedited statutory unlawful detainer procedure can usually be completed in 30 to 60 days, and without significant expense. The challenging question facing office landlords is: after obtaining possession, does it make financial sense to pursue litigation against the tenant for breach of lease damages? Said another way, is it in the best interest of the owner/landlord to file a breach of lease lawsuit and incur further attorneys’ fees pursuing an evicted tenant for monetary damages?

A breach of lease action is typically brought after a landlord has regained possession of the premises through an unlawful detainer action, voluntary return of possession, or notice of belief of abandonment. As discussed below, if the landlord has obtained a judgment as part of regaining possession, the landlord and counsel have valuable tools to investigate the assets of a tenant or guarantor to assist in determining whether a breach of lease action makes financial sense. If possession was obtained without an unlawful detainer judgment, as a result of various state and federal legislation restricting consumer information publically available, the owner/landlord is limited to the financial information obtained as part of the lease negotiation and execution process and the information available through public records – a sparser universe of available information. In those instances, the art of balancing the factors discussed below is as close to a scientific approach as a landlord may be able to make in deciding whether to pursue litigation for lost rent against the tenant. We will examine both scenarios and the factors a landlord should consider in this article.

Unlawful Detainer Judgment
One of the most valuable methods to determine whether to pursue a tenant for future rent damages is to initially pursue an unlawful detainer judgment. If the return of possession occurred through a court judgment, the landlord has in its possession a judgment for the then delinquent rent, which is a valuable tool to the landlord in determining whether to proceed with additional litigation to attempt to recover future rent. In cases where the sufficiency of a tenant or guarantor’s assets are questionable (which is the vast majority of cases), it is recommended to attempt to collect on the unlawful detainer judgment before making the decision to litigate the future rent claims in a breach of lease action. There are two primary steps to take in collecting on an unlawful detainer judgment. First, the landlord should levy all bank accounts of the tenant. Bank levies are inexpensive (approximately $200 per bank account), typically only take two to three weeks to complete, and are very effective. In addition to levies, it is recommended that an examination under oath be immediately scheduled and taken. This allows questioning regarding the tenant or guarantor’s financial condition and ability to pay the Judgment. After concluding the bank levies and examination under oath, a landlord should be in a position to make an educated decision whether to expend the attorneys’ fees to pursue a breach of lease judgment or whether the tenant is essentially judgment proof.

If the Landlord Does Not Have an Unlawful Detainer Judgment
If the landlord obtained possession in a manner that did not result in a judgment (i.e. via a notice of belief of abandonment or voluntary return of possession), then the valuable tools of bank levies and examinations under oath after judgment are not available. In this instance, the landlord should examine and balance the factors below in order to make a more informed decision whether to pursue a breach of lease action.

Factors to Consider in Determining if a Landlord Should Pursue Breach of Lease Damages

1. Corporate versus personal tenant. In the event the subject tenant has formed a corporation and the corporation is a “mom and pop” single-location operation, this strongly weighs against filing a breach of lease action. These sorts of corporations are typically shells with no assets.

2. Tenant’s Assets. One of the primary considerations in pursuing any tenant is whether the tenant (whether individual or corporate) has assets sufficient to satisfy all or any part of a potential judgment. This same analysis applies to any guarantor. The goal of the landlord and its attorney in deciding whether to pursue a tenant or guarantor is to determine what assets may be available to satisfy any potential judgment. Unfortunately, in California very little information is readily obtainable other than real estate ownership information. Lease language may allow the Landlord to obtain financials on the tenant and also run a credit report – both of which may be valuable in determining a tenant’s assets.

3. Tenant’s Retention of Legal Counsel. As a general rule, if a tenant has the financial ability and does in fact retain legal counsel, that is a sign that the tenant may have assets worth protecting.

4. The Amount in Dispute. Regardless of what financial information may be available about a tenant or guarantor, the greater the amount in controversy, the more likely a landlord should file a breach of lease or breach of guaranty action. The filing of the complaint by itself is a relatively inexpensive investment to see how the tenant or guarantor reacts.

5. Other Locations/Businesses. A landlord may have knowledge of other locations or other businesses run by the tenant. If a tenant has other locations, the chance of recovery increases.

6. Other Information. This factor can be called the “scuttlebutt.” It is not uncommon to find out from the property manager that the tenant abandoned the subject premises, but moved across the street, took all the clients from the former business, and is operating the same business under a new name. This information can prove valuable to the owner in determining if there is a potential to pierce the corporate veil and create personal liability on the part of the principals of the tenant’s business. A tenant may tell his office neighbor or the office manager about the house she has in Tahoe, or the luxury home they have under construction.

Right to Attach Orders

In California, landlords (and other creditors) can file concurrently with the breach of lease complaint an application for a right to attach order, which provides the landlord the power to locate and levy any non-exempt assets of the tenant or guarantor, effectively “freezing” those assets. The cost of an application for right to attach order is relatively nominal (attorneys fees typically range from $3,000 to $6,000), and the settlement leverage created by attaching the tenant’s assets is significant.

Conclusion

An owner/landlord’s strategy in determining whether to file a breach of lease action to recover all of the owner’s lease damages involves a balancing of all factors known by the asset manager, property manager and counsel. If all known information is added to the conversation, this compilation of information should lead to an increased chance of recovery and less wasted attorneys’ fees.

BOMA Oakland/East Bay and BOMA San Francisco Collaborating to Co-Host
BOMA Bay Area TOBY Awards & BOMA Bay Area EARTH Awards

In a move designed to generate additional participation in two key industry awards programs, BOMA Oakland/East Bay and BOMA San Francisco are now collaborating to co-host The Outstanding Building of the Year (TOBY) Award, and the EARTH Awards. BOMA Oakland/East Bay will open its TOBY program to BOMA San Francisco members, and conversely, BOMA San Francisco will expand the EARTH Awards to include commercial properties in Oakland/East Bay. BOMA Oakland/East Bay will take primary responsibility for managing the TOBY program, and BOMA San Francisco will manage the EARTH Awards program.

The BOMA Bay Area TOBY program kicked off in August. See www.bomaoeb.org for application instructions. Local winners will be selected and be recognized at a luncheon in November 2010. The 2011 BOMA Bay Area EARTH Awards program kicks off in November 2010, and winners will be recognized at a special luncheon in April 2011.

The BOMA Bay Area EARTH Award recognizes member buildings within the BOMA San Francisco and BOMA Oakland/East Bay territories that utilize the most comprehensive resource management programs, including commercial recycling programs, energy and water conservation efforts, air quality and toxics reduction programs, support for public transportation, and effective use of tenant education programs geared to promoting sustainability practices in commercial office buildings. For more information, please contact Zachary Brown, chair, BOMA’s Energy & Environment Committee at zachary_brown@equityoffice.com.

BOMA has a solid track record of defending our members’ interests against bad policy. For example, we successfully defeated Prop L – the real estate transfer tax hike in November 2002, saving local investors more than $500 million over the next six years. In just six weeks, BOMA-SF-PAC raised nearly $750,000, hired political consultants and waged a multimedia campaign to defeat the initiative, 55% to 45%. Members of the Board of Supervisors placed a doubling of the transfer tax again on the ballot in November, 2008, and, with our industry in the doldrums, and little ability to fight the measure, it passed handily. Now, San Francisco’s real estate transfer tax rate of 1.5% is among the highest in the state. Despite that fact, our current Board of Supervisors has again – only two years later - voted to place another substantial transfer tax increase on the ballot, raising the rate by 60% on properties sold at more than $10 million to 2.5%. This time, BOMA is leading the fight to defeat it, and has partnered with other business groups, particularly the SF Hotel Council, to create the coalition www.EconomicRecoverySF.com. Check it out, and seriously consider making a donation!

Our advocacy success is only possible with adequate funding and our members’ commitment to being a voice of reason. There are many ways that each of us can do to make a difference. Please join your fellow members by taking these actions:

• raise money for BOMA-SF-PAC by including the voluntary recommended PAC contribution in your 2011 budget (30% of a building’s dues or $400 for associate member firms),
• inform your clients/partners of our efforts to promote policies that enhance asset value rather than diminish it, and ask them to help,
• inform your tenants of proposed legislation that might negatively impact them and their businesses,
• write letters to local policy makers encouraging them to opt for legislation that supports job creation and economic recovery, and
• write letters to the editor of the Chronicle and Examiner with the same message.

BOMA is just about to enter its second century of service to the commercial real estate industry, and protecting private property rights and securing a stable commercial environment for our members and their clients will continue to be a central component of our mission. Here’s to a promising a prosperous second centennial, made possible by you.
